'Ever Forward'

Size - 60cm x 48cm

Medium - Watercolour on Cartridge paper

Concept - "Ever Forward", my school motto, inspires me to dream ahead while not forgetting my roots. 12 years of my school life made me the optimistic person I am. I have depicted this by showing myself standing near the Corinthian style pillars that were my favourite part of the building and looking into a colourful future.

Inspired by realistic painter Shuchi Krishan, I focused on the architecture from my school.

'Vani's House'

Size - 45.72cm x 60.96cm x 15.24cm

Medium - Acrylic paint on wood, clay, recycled fabrics, watercolours

Concept - To get a better idea of who I seem like from the outside, I questioned people around me to give their views about me. I noticed that there are certain aspects that add to my personality. Each room represents one aspect, the central room alluding to my most constant state while other rooms represent my love for cartoons, planning, deep conversations, introspection, creating, adventure, and nature. The framework of the house represents the core of who I am.

'AWASH'

Size - 3 artworks of 37.4cm x 32.3cm

Medium - Prints of pen and ink drawings on paper, acrylic on glass

Concept - While studying a flush, I focused on the concept of a release of something so simple yet so great in utility magnitude. I tried to convey unity in the literal meanings of a flush through the detailed black and white patterned illustrations that contrast the abstract unpredictable nature of the flush in the form of multiple miniscule actions, larger more directed movement or bold lines of radical strong movement as shown on the 3 painted glasses.

‘A Healthy Meal’

Size - 91.44cm x 91.44cm

Medium - Oil paint on canvas

Concept - I was inspired by a painting called, ‘Dominus Aeris escape -5’ by Thukral and Tagra to use surrealism to express my views on vegetarianism. The piece emphasises the contrasts between the dreams of voiceless animals like cows and the ease with which meat is consumed today. The gumball in the centre of the painting depicts the never-ending wants of humans and its colour is symbolic of a vegetarian sign. The illogical interplay of objects aid in conveying what the phrases in the poem mean to me.

'Folk Flowers for Folk'

Size - 110cm x 125cm

Medium - Installation including paper prints of flowers painted using poster paint and watercolours, glass mirror, and a wooden frame

Concept - After studying multiple folk-art styles from different cultures, I was intrigued by the significance of flowers in different cultural contexts, specifically as gifts.
My interactive artwork uses traditional folk art forms like Tanjore, Ukiyo–e, Australian folk art, Nianhu, Mexican folk art, Warli, Gond and Hungarian folk art styles to show the universal nature of flowers.
Using layers of circular flowers to create a ceiling of them, I wanted to build an overhead garden by placing a mirror below.

'Where's Vani'

Size - 65cm x 46cm

Medium - Watercolours, inks, and colour pencil on Cartridge paper

Concept - Resonating with the character Waldo in "Where's Waldo?", I inserted drawings of myself in the three countries I may choose to study - the United States, Singapore and India. Inspired by Martin Handford's use of intricate details in his illustrations and patterns and colours to hide characters, I hid myself wearing sunglasses in each of the places. Each city is depicted in a different style to represent their cultures, including details of stores, restaurants and people of the place.

'Where's the Time?"

Size - 1 minute 94 seconds

Medium - Stop frame animation

Concept - The film started with the concept of the relative nature of time that I learnt in my physics class. I experienced this while painting as a change in my speed made time seem to move slower or faster. I then showed the constancy of time used in rhythm by following a metronome and how I apply that to work with consistency. Finally, I showed the time billionaire concept of investing through the formation of a sandcastle to represent the result of compounding after a billion seconds.
